LAST WEEK

Vic Cunnyngnam was a (modern) vintage jewel. Boy those rods were fun in our days. A buddy of mine had built a beautiful roadster, chromed to the hilt and came out one morning to drive to school and it was gone. He parked it on the driveway by the house, and someone came in the night and rolled it to the the street and poof - it was never seen again. I had a 29 Ford roadster that developed a short and had to be rewired, by a mechanic Two months after I sold it it burned to the ground one night. Oh well.

NEXT WEEK

Mara Protas will bring us up to date about heart and lung rehabilitation. This will be very informative and maybe a matter of life and death - ours.

“A survey says that American workers work the first three hours every day just to pay their taxes. So that’s why we can’t get anything done in the morning: we’re government workers!”

Heard from Charlie Kraal in Oregon that the crab are not cooperating yet, and he likes getting the Wheel via e-mail. Does everyone in the club have a valid e-mail address?
