This week:

Sarah Tanguay
Local challenges, Global solutions

The Nature Conservancy

With 95% of California's wetlands gone, migratory birds have nowhere to land so The Nature Conservancy is reinventing the way we save migratory bird species.

Our speaker, Sarah Tanguay is an Associate Director of Philanthropy for the California Chapter of The Nature Conservancy. Prior to her time at the Conservancy, she worked in the area of renewable energy. However, her deep interest in conservation led her to a degree in Environmental Philosophy from the University of Wisconsin-Stevens Point, where she also studied biology with an emphasis in ecology. Sarah holds an M.A. in Philanthropy and Organizational Development from Saint Mary's University in Minnesota.

Last week: Thanks for voting

The much awaited results of the Covina Rotary Board election are in and Tony's 2017-18 Board of Directors will include: Maggie Salazar, Dario Castellanos, Crystal Hernandez, and Jerry Mora, along with three returning members: Patricia Harvey, Johnny Brittain, and Gordon Cooper. For those of you hoping for a recount, please submit your request in writing to Dr. Jill Stein.
