"From Caves to Classrooms"

How Rotary helped me study Dead Sea Scrolls and care about foster kids.

Robert Duke, PhD, Dean of the School of Theology at Azusa Pacific University

Ph.D., Ancient Near Eastern Languages and Cultures, UCLA

M.A., Hebrew Literature, UCLA

M.A., Hebrew Bible, Jerusalem University College

B.A., Theology, Multnomah Bible College

In 2000-2001, Bobby Duke was a Rotary Ambassadorial Scholar at Hebrew University in Jerusalem. That year he focused on Dead Sea Scrolls and lead him the following year to begin a PhD at UCLA. Since then, Bobby has continued his work on the Scrolls and is also dedicating time to foster care issues in Los Angeles County. His Rotary year shaped his perspectives on higher education and how the Four-Way Test can cause administrators in colleges and universities to think about making education accessible to all.

From 1947 to 2013, nearly 38,000 men and women from about 100 nations studied abroad under as a Rotary Ambassadorial Scholar. While the program officially ended in 2013, scholarships are still granted though district and global grants.

Famous Rotary Ambassadorial Scholars include Paul Volker, the former Federal Reserve Chairman, and movie critic Roger Ebert.

Last week

Dan Banh gave an inspiring and memorable "Craft Talk" about his experiences in Vietnam as a child, and his journey to America. Thanks for sharing Dan!

Next week: The Andy McIntyre Show

Despite the many attempts by your humble, yet persistent, Wheel editor, Andy McIntyre refused to crack and let us know what he has on tap for next week's program. One thing we know about Andy, he always puts on a great show. We can't wait to see what you have in store for us next week Andy!
